Your Duty of Fair Representation

Following the introduction of the Insurance Act (2015) which we fully embrace, you have the duty of fair representation which means that you have to disclose to us either every material fact that you know or ought to know by reasonable search both within your company or organisation, and externally or give us sufficient information so as to prompt our further enquiries on certain matters.

A material fact is defined as one that would influence the judgement of a prudent underwriter.

If in doubt, disclose the information to allow us to consider as appropriate.

Reasonable searches within and outside of your company or organisation include information held or suspected by your business senior management, anyone internal and external who contributes to the placement of your insurance including but not solely your insurance adviser, loss adjuster, any consultants etc. Material facts should be disclosed in a reasonably clear and accessible manner and you may want to keep records of members of your senior management and individuals responsible to arrange your insurance so that you can easily access this information and disclose their knowledge as appropriate.

In case of breach of duty of fair representation, the Insurance Act (2015) stipulated the following remedies:

- In case of a deliberate or reckless breach of duty by the policyholder: the insurer will be able to avoid the policy and keep any premiums;
- if the breach of duty is neither deliberate nor reckless but the insurer would not have entered into the contract had they known the facts: the insurer will be able to avoid the policy but must return all premiums;
- if the breach is neither deliberate nor reckless and the insurer would have entered into the contract albeit on different terms other than terms relating to premium: the insurer will treat the contract as if those different terms applied – for example, any additional conditions or exclusions that would have been imposed;
- if the breach is neither deliberate nor reckless and the insurer would have entered into the contract albeit at a higher premium: the insurer will be able to reduce the claim payment on a proportionate basis as per the difference between the premium charged and the premium that the insurer would have charged had the material facts been disclosed.

Our stance to Insurance Act (2015) is available on our website and can also be provided on request.

Average applies to some of the Sections so it is important that the sums insured are correct and regularly review.
